Vision

What is Family Engagement? What is it not?

It is a shared responsibility of families, schools, and communities, and is a continuous process that takes place from birth to young adulthood and crosses multiple learning settings, including the home and community.

Harvard Family Research Project (HFRP)
FAMILY ENGAGEMENT means building relationships with families that support family well-being, strong parent-child relationships, and ongoing learning and development of parents and children alike. It refers to the beliefs, attitudes, behaviors, and activities of families that support their children’s positive development from early childhood through young adulthood. Family engagement happens in the home, early childhood program, school, and community. It is a shared responsibility with all those who support children’s learning.

If you look at the challenges our country faces, we cannot solve them by putting people and putting issues in silos. We have to think about much higher leverage and impact. And thinking about two generations at once – that if you improve things for the parents, you improve life for their children, and, in fact, the other way around – is critical.

— Hilary Pennington, Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation

“We envision an America in which a legacy of economic security and educational success passes from one generation to the next.”

Protective factors are conditions or attributes of individuals, families, communities or the larger society that mitigate or eliminate risk.

Promotive factors are conditions or attributes of individuals, families, communities or the larger society that actively enhance well-being.

TAKEN TOGETHER, PROTECTIVE AND PROMOTIVE FACTORS INCREASE THE PROBABILITY OF POSITIVE, ADAPTIVE AND HEALTHY OUTCOMES, EVEN IN THE FACE OF RISK AND ADVERSITY.

Positive stress results from adverse experiences that are short-lived.

Tolerable stress refers to adverse experiences that are more intense but still relatively short-lived. Examples include the death of a loved one, a natural disaster, a frightening accident, and family disruptions such as separation or divorce.
Toxic stress results from intense adverse experiences that may be sustained over a long period of time—weeks, months or even years.

It's the Relationships and the Environment that Matters.

Safety, stability, and nurturing are three critical qualities of relationships that make a difference for children as they grow and develop.

- Safety: The extent to which a child is free from fear and secure from physical or psychological harm within their social and physical environment.

- Stability: The degree of predictability and consistency in a child’s social, emotional, and physical environment.

- Nurturing: The extent to which a parent or caregiver is available and able to sensitively and consistently respond to and meet the needs of their child.

Education:

Parents’ level of educational attainment—particularly postsecondary education—is a strong predictor of economic mobility.

Education that includes skill development linked to high-demand jobs with opportunities for advancement is key.

Economic Supports:

These include housing, transportation, financial education and asset-building, tax credits, child care subsidies, student financial aid, health insurance, and food assistance.

They provide an important scaffold for families as they work to build the skills that lead to better jobs and longer-term financial stability.
Social Capital:
Social Capital builds on the strength and resilience of families, bolstering the aspirations parents have for their children.

• Peer support;
• Family, friends, and neighbors;
• Community and faith-based organizations;
• School and workplace contacts;
• Leadership and empowerment programs;
• Case managers or career coaches;
• Social networks such as cohort models and learning communities.

Children’s Literature
Teachers can provide annotated bibliographies of appropriate books on a variety of topics to support families in difficult times and to help them identify books that might fit their needs.
