

The HighScope Preschool Curriculum

ACTIVE LEARNING

The HighScope Curriculum integrates social-emotional learning content with other academic areas and gives children daily opportunities to practice skills such as emotional self-regulation and problem-solving. Teachers further support social development by helping children learn how to resolve interpersonal conflicts.

A comprehensive approach that supports lifetime benefits for families and children

A reliable and effective research-based curriculum that meets

- State early learning standards
- The Head Start Child Development and Early Learning Framework
- NAEYC developmentally appropriate practice guidelines

Adults apply intentional teaching practices by

- Planning developmentally appropriate activities
- Supporting and extending children's learning
- Providing materials that reflect children's interests and home culture
- Actively engaging children through direct experiences in pursuit of shared learning goals

Children's interests and choices are at the heart of HighScope programs. By making plans and following through on their intentions, children are taking the first step in the learning process and constructing their own knowledge through interactions with the world around them.

A Framework for Understanding and Supporting Children's Learning

The Key Developmental Indicators (KDIs) form the curriculum content for children ages three to five years. All together they define the knowledge children are acquiring as they interact with materials, people, ideas, and events.

HighScope's KDIs work seamlessly with COR Advantage — an observation-based tool for assessing child development at all stages from birth to kindergarten, with distinct and well-defined criteria that are easy to apply. See coradvantage.org for more information.

The HighScope Approach — Designed and Research-Validated to Have a Lifelong Positive Effect

- The HighScope Curriculum is a high quality, developmentally based program, founded on a philosophy of “active participatory learning,” in which children and adults are engaged, interactive partners in the learning process.
- In HighScope programs, learning occurs in a play-based environment where children and adults work together to develop children’s knowledge and skills in problem solving, decision making, and dependence, and to promote their sense of curiosity, persistence, and creativity. Educational materials and the learning environment build on children’s interests, accommodate different developmental and ability levels, and reflect the diversity of children’s family and community backgrounds.
- In HighScope programs, knowledgeable and intentional teachers scaffold early learning by supporting children’s current level of understanding and gently extending their thinking and reasoning to the next level.
- There is a growing awareness among educators, policymakers, parents, and the general public that social and emotional learning is equally, if not more, important than early academics in determining school readiness. The HighScope Curriculum fully integrates academic and social-emotional learning in its curriculum content (key developmental indicators) and assessment (COR Advantage), addressing all domains of development: approaches to learning; social and emotional development; physical development and health; language, literacy, and communication (including English language learners); mathematics, science; social studies; and the creative arts. These domains are aligned with Common Core State Standards, the Head Start Child Development and Early Learning Framework and Early Head Start Essential Domains, state early childhood learning standards, and the standards and recommendations of professional educational organizations.
- The number and scope of state-funded early childhood programs has grown. With a few exceptions, state governments have invested in preschool programs aimed at serving at-risk children. Many states have already or are in the process of instituting universal preschool and full-day preschool. In addition to traditional, classroom-based preschool programs, states are also funding community-based initiatives with a birth-K focus. The HighScope Curriculum is appropriate for use in all of these settings and has an important role in state-funded early childhood programs.
